

Cover Photo:
Silvery thread moss is a common contaminant of putting green turf.

Employees should be trained to identify potential hazards on the golf course, and to immediately report those hazards to management. See page 6.

The fall overseeding establishment process takes understanding from both the golf course superintendent and the golfer. See page 10.

USGA® GREEN SECTION Record

1

Moss Eradication in Putting Green Turf

With persistence it can be selectively removed.

By Keith A. Happ

6

Risk Management for Golf Facilities: Are You at Risk?

Some ideas for minimizing your exposure.

By John M. Fotiades

10

The Pros and Cons of Fairway Overseeding

Winter overseeding of bermudagrass fairways has both benefits and some negative consequences.

By John H. Foy

13

Long-Term Aerification

A bentgrass fairway study compares hollow- and solid-tine core aerification.

By Drs. Stanton E. Brauen, William J. Johnston, and Roy L. Goss

16

A-4, Not Your Parents' Bentgrass

New management techniques for a new bentgrass variety.

By Cutler Robinson, CGCS

19

Introducing a New Creeping Bentgrass Cultivar Through Interseeding: Does It Work?

It sounds like a good idea, but there are drawbacks.

By Patricia Sweeney, Ph.D., and Karl Danneberger, Ph.D.

21

Certification: A Gratifying Experience

Seabrook Island and the Audubon Program become a natural fit.

By Allan H. Pulaski

23

News Notes

24

Chasing Color

Many of today's golfers think that if the turfgrass isn't green, it is dead.

By Patrick M. O'Brien

26

Turf Twisters